“That this Council makes a submission to the Central Bank Review of Mortgage Rules, to suggest that the rules be amended to take account of a person’s track record of paying rent. By paying rent over a number of years, a mortgage applicant has demonstrated a certain capacity to repay and this should be reflected in the rules governing how a mortgage application is assessed. This change can assist many people to be successful in their mortgage application. The difference in mortgage versus rent, is in many cases, not too different.
